For Immediate Release:

Grambling State University will be reaching out to high school students interested in attending Grambling State University using the fall online "CollegeWeekLive” fair for prospective students.

The college fair planned for October 23, 2014, will feature more than 500 colleges from across the U.S. Teens and their parents, regardless of geographic location, can meet online with Grambling admissions and financial aid representatives from the convenience of any computer.

By participating in live chats – scheduled from 4 to 9 p.m. – prospective students can ask questions about what it's like to be a Grambling Tiger, while parents can ask about admission requirements or financial aid. The fall event will help the university connect with prospective students who may not normally be able to visit the campus. CollegeWeekLive is another opportunity to give prospective students an online experience that will showcase Grambling as a world-class institution, where students are engaged in and outside of the classroom.

The free online college fair at http://www.collegeweeklive.com/en_CA/Guest/CollegeWeekLive_Fall is planned from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. (CT) each day and will include live chats from 4 to 9 p.m. with Grambling representatives who can provide admissions and financial aid advice.

Students or parents can register for the Grambling "CollegeWeekLive" event at no charge by visiting http://www.collegeweeklive.com/

For more information contact Dr. Damon Wade, VP for Institutional Effectiveness and Enrollment Management  (318) 274-7701 waded@gram.edu